Product Overview

The average person is exposed to 5 000 marketing messages per day. The question then is, how do companies maximise their marketing spend in the age of information overload? The answer lies in our everyday email interactions. The average employee receives over 2 500 emails per month, this is the perfect opportunity to market your products and services to a captive and receptive audience.

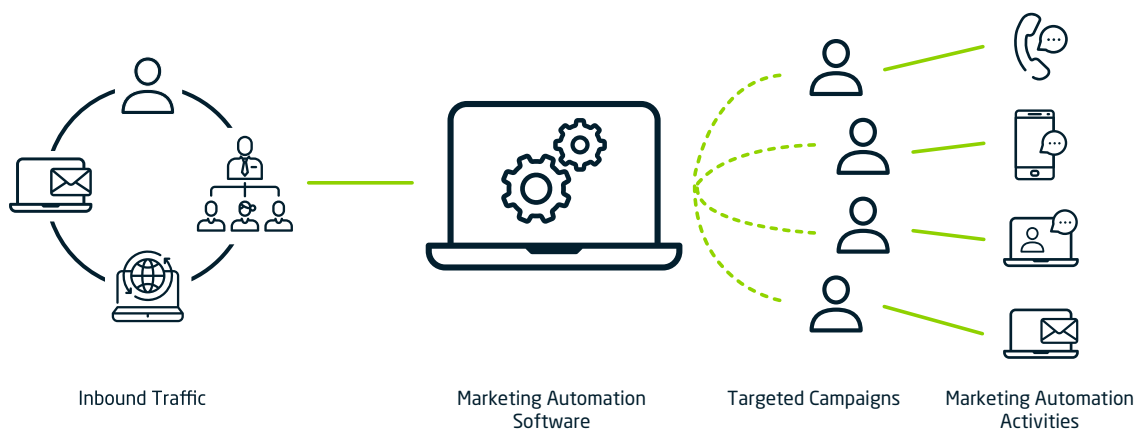

Vox Email Branding is a powerful service that optimises your daily business email by turning it into a sales and marketing opportunity. This management tool allows you to add consistent, tamper-proof company-wide signatures to all outbound emails. This includes customisable promotional banners that offer real time reporting and insights into the click-through rates of an email signature campaign's performance.

While the on-line platform gives you the ability to create, manage and report on your email signature campaigns from a single location. Campaigns can be scheduled in advance or on the fly, with a start and an end date.

Vox Email Branding is compatible with all popular mail platforms, meaning no extra hardware or software is required to transform your email correspondence into an effective marketing medium.
